

JASPER ACKERMAN

As a young boy traveling cross country in a covered wagon, Jasper Ackerman could only dream of what his future would hold. Serving during World War I and II, he worked hard, earning the rank of lieutenant colonel and was well-decorated for his distinguished service.

-1970-

In 1916, Mr. Ackerman began working as an elevator operator for Exchange National Bank in Colorado Springs and worked his way up to majority owner, chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer before leaving 54 years later.

He was a legend in Colorado Springs as a banker and also for his ranching hobby.
