During its twenty-five year history, the Oklahoma City Community
Foundation has been served by an outstanding group of community leaders as Trustees. Thirty-seven men and women have helped the Community Foundation fulfill its purpose of preserving charitable capital and enhancing its value for the benefit of the Oklahoma City area. This leadership has been essential not only to the growth of the asset base but to the ability of the Community Foundation to respond to the changing needs of the community.

Community Foundation Launche

It was the year of Woodstock, the music festival that epitomized at least one in segment of the youth movement of the sixties. It was the year that schools were desegregated in Oklahoma City. It was the year the National Tax Reform Act of 1969 was passed, imposing new restrictions on private foundations. It was the year the Oklahoma City Community Foundation was launched.

"A community foundation provides the ideal way for people who have had a good life in the community to leave something for the benefit of the city's future residents," said J. Kimbal Johnson, a former director of The Cleveland Foundation who spoke at a dinner hosted by John and Eleanor Kirkpatrick to launch the Community Foundation in Oklahoma City.

The Oklahoma City Community Foundation was modeled after the Cleveland Foundation, the oldest and one of the largest community foundations in the nation. A few years before, John Kirkpatrick had discovered that there were considerable tax advantages in making contributions to a public community foundation over a private foundation. He recognized the need for a steady and permanent source of income for non-profit agencies, many of which have difficulty attracting and managing endowment funds.

Kirkpatrick had some ideas about what it would take for a community foundation to succeed. He wanted to create an entity with its own system of checks and balances over which no one faction could gain control. He wanted an organization with the flexibility to adapt to changing needs in the community, so that the original intent of donors could be preserved even if the specific causes or organizations they supported no longer existed.

Kirkpatrick credits attorney Don Ellison for creating an organization that accomplishes those goals. Ellison was an attorney who created the legal underpinnings for the Oklahoma City Community Foundation. He established a system of checks and balances through trustee selection and division of fiscal responsibility.

Of the twelve members of the Foundation's Board of Trustees, six are selected by specified public institutions and six are named from the community atlarge. No trustee serves longer than ten years and no group or individual is able to retain control. The Board of Trustees and Staff of the Community Foundation are responsible for developing assets, managing their investment, and overseeing the distribution of earnings.

The Community Foundation is an endowment fund that was designed to meet the test of time. It has come a long way since its first Annual Report, when the net worth was $45,299 from one major donor. Twenty-five years later, thousands of donors have contributed to a net worth of $81 million.

Some of our earlier challenges, such as convincing donors that the Community Foundation can meet the test of time, have been met. Other challenges are more persistent. The 1971 Annual Report used a quote by Aristotle, which remains relevant; "To give away money is an easy matter, and in any man's power. But to decide to whom to give it and how large and when, and for what purpose and how, is neither in every man's power, nor an easy matter." It is reassuring to know that some challenges present opportunities for evolution rather than solution.

Name Funds

A Name Fund is a vehicle for living donors to actively direct financial support to causes they care about now. A fund named for a friend or a loved one is like a promise, to continue to support the interests of that person and provide a link between his times and the present. Name Funds are a reminder that a community evolves from the efforts and personalities of the people who have gone before us, as well as those who are here now.

Since 1969, thousands of individual contributions have been made to the permanent endowment funds of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation. Name Funds are those individuals and groups whose total contributions have reached or exceeded $5,000. Earnings on these Name Funds benefit organizations or areas of interest specified by the donors. When earnings are distributed to organizations, they are always identified by contributing Name Funds. These are the Name Funds as of June 30, 1994. They are listed chronologically under the year the Fund was established.

They provided initial leadership, contributions, and administrative support for the founding of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation in 1969. Mr. Kirkpatrick served as the Founding President of the Trustees from 1969 to 1979 and again served as a Trustee from 1985 to 1991. A petition in probate the of the years of the trust. 61 E. K. Gayiord was Donors can leave bequests for a wide range of community purposes that range from funds designated for a specific nonprofit agency to the Fund for Oklahoma City, used by the Trustees to meet the changing needs of the community. Once these contributions have become part of the permanent endowment, the Oklahoma City Community Foundation is firmly committed to recognizing the original charitable intentions of the donor as long as practical or possible.

W.T. Payne made one of the first major bequests to the Community Foundation with the gift of stock in Payne Petroleum. He asked that the earnings from his Name Fund be used for "donor-advised" contributions, meaning that each year the donor makes recommendations about the distribution of earnings. Payne's Name Fund was his way of continuing to give when he was no longer here. Members of his family still make donor-advised recommendations annually.

Florence Wilson was quite specific about the organizations she wanted to support. Through the Community Foundation she created endowments for the YWCA, YMCA, Oklahoma Zoological Society, the Allied Arts, and the Cowboy Hall of Fame. Additionally she endowed an award for an annual voice competition conducted through the Oklahoma Symphony. When the Symphony ceased operations, the Community Foundation directed the earnings on this portion of the fund to the Orchestra League which had assumed sponsorship of the contest.

Florida Knight left a building in trust with provisions that income from the property be used to benefit handicapped children. The Community Foundation has administered the "field of interest" fund since 1977 making grants from its income to benefit mentally retarded children, deaf children, burn victims, and children under going cancer treatment. Mrs. Knight's building was torn down by tant way. In 1981, Olive May Steward wrote her will and left the residual of her estate, after bequests to family and friends, to the Community Foundation with the request to utilize the funds per instructions left with her attorney in a sealed envelope. She could then change her instructions without the bother of changing the will. When she died in 1994, the attorney and the Community Foundation opened the envelope and found she wanted to create a fund which would support the health, welfare and humanitarian needs of the community. This "field of interest" fund will be administered as part of the Community Foundation's grant programs.

Fund Provides Scholarships For Oklahoma City Students

By John Perry Staff Writer Oklahoma City students can now earn scholarships from a fund established by two local foundations if they score well on College Board Advanced Placement Tests.

"A little bribe here or there never hurts, said superintendent Arthur Steller during news conference announcing

All high school shu-

dents enrolled in Oklahoma City advanced placement classes are eligible for the scholarships. The program awards $100 to students who score a 3 on an advanced place ment test. A score of 4 earns $200 and a score of 5, which is the maximum, earns $300.

Most colleges and universities aware credit in subjects are students earn a

In 1970 Edward King Gaylord, founder of the Oklahoma Publishing Company, established the first scholarship fund at the Oklahoma City Community Foundation. Although there were no specific criteria for the scholarships, Mr. Gaylord wanted to provide support for "deserving students." Through the years the fund has supported several different scholarship programs including National Merit scholarships, training for high school counselors, and grant programs at local colleges.

Other scholarships with different criteria would follow. Willie (Elizabeth Shipley left funds for a scholarship for students who were andal from the western half of Oklahoma and wanted to pursue "education or Viah training after high school." Friends of Harley Custer established a m @ Dscholarship award in his memory for a participant in the Oklahoma Junior Livestock Show. The Dana Corporation Scholarship Fund benefits dependents of employees at the company's Oklahoma City plant. William and Janet Johnson created a scholarship fund for graduates of Minco High School. The Community Foundation administers all of these scholarship funds.

The Kirshner Trusts provided endowment for scholarships for children in foster care. The Independent Insurance Agents of Oklahoma established a scholarship fund, named in honor of Marie Welch, for a college student who has chosen insurance as his major field of study. The Pi Beta Phi Alumni Club Scholarship fund supports a student member at University of Oklahoma or Oklahoma State University. The Community Foundation holds the endowment for these scholarship funds and provides support to the selection committees.

Community Foundation scholarship funds exceed $3 million in value. Some of the programs were specifically outlined by the donor and the Community Foundation administers the program. In other cases the donor has given broad guidelines for the use of the funds and the Community Foundation has developed programs consistent with donor intentions. Sometimes the earnings on the scholarship funds are returned to the sponsoring groups which then select the recipients.

Donor who are planning scholarship contributions through bequests need to provide a vehicle to administer the scholarships. For donors who want to help students who might attend several different schools or donors who want to support learning and training opportunities that are not limited to traditional higher education, the Community Foundation is a way to accomplish these goals.

Kirkpatrick Center under construction

Escrow Funds are contributions which are not part of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation's permanent endowinsent. They are used for a variety of purposes. Escrow Funds are a great example of the flexibility of the Community Foundation and its willingness to "prove a convenient, efficient, and effective way through which donors can contribute assets to charitable purposes."

Sometimes escrow funds are used to accumulate contributions for a special project thereby avoiding the need to create a new organization to receive the funds, or allowing donors to make contributions before all of the necessary tax-exempt approvals are received. The funds to construct the Kirkpatrick Center were set aside at the Community Foundation for a period of several years while the plans for the museum complex were being drawn and the organization established. Funds for new lights at the Oklahoma City Tennis Center were collected in a Community Foundation escrow account and then used to purchase and install the improvements to this park. Escrow funds have been used for projects as diverse as new uniforms for the Jones High School Marching Band and the Constitutional Revision Study Committee.

After a local hospice organization disbanded, the Oklahoma County Medical Association wanted to help restore hospice services as quickly as possible. While the appropriate filings for a new organization were made, the Community Foundation collected contributions for the new Hospice of Oklahoma County through an escrow fund and paid its expenses. When the approvals were received, the funds were contributed to Hospice which was already delivering services.

A donor to an escrow fund may make a contribution in one year, perhaps one in which the tax benefits are greatest. In following years, he may request distributions to be made from the fund for grants to specific charities, or be held for a specific purpose in the future. Donors can contribute appreciated assets which are difficult to divide and after the asset is sold request that contributions be made to a number of charities. This is much easier for the donor and the charities alike.

Escrow funds received no earnings and are not charged an administrative fee. The Community Foundation is in an unique position to administer funds for a wide variety of purposes. The goal, to increase the quality of life in Oklahoma City is simple. The Community Foundation is committed to that goal, and to finding new ways to help donors and organizations meet community needs.

Economically those were troubled times, both nationally had dway and locally. In 1986, the price of oil was down to $10 a barrel. The Tax Reform Act of 1986 raised many questions likely about the tax advantages of charitable contributions and sparked a decline in real estate. The Gramm-Rudman Act was passed the year before, requiring a balanced budget by 1991. President Reagan started his second term with a "Star Wars" program, escalating defense expenditures. In the fall of 1987, a stock market collapse occurred that was considered by some to be worse than the Crash of 1929. Yet that year the fund balance at the Community Foundation increased by the largest amount so far in its history -$7,323,827.

For the Oklahoma City Community Foundation, those years were a period of transition and extended outreach into the community. The new building was an accessible, one-story, street-level building in the center of downtown, just south of Kerr Park with an open door on Park Avenue. Inside the building was the Community Foundation's very own staff: Nancy Anthony, Executive Director; Carla Pickrell, Comptroller; and Susan Ruzycki, Office Manager.

In 1985, the Foundation announced that it would change its fiscal year period to end June 30 and begin July 1; this reflected more closely the budgetary year of most of the non-profit organizations in the community. Additionally, a fiscal year based on the calendar year had not been sufficiently responsive to donors' tax planning needs.

An administrative charge of one-tenth of one per cent of the average monthly market value of the fund was charged to each fund.

The Community Foundation undertook a variety of new projects. The Directory of Oklahoma Foundations has been published four times and the Sharing Exchange, a catalogue of non-profit organizations, was published yearly between 1988 and 1990. The newsletter, now published three times a year, gives updated news between annual reports.

While assets have grown from $21,369,435 at the end of 1985 to $80,536.431 in 1994, the foundation's staff has grown to seven but administrative costs for all functions remain below 0.8 percent of assets. The Community Foundation continues to provide valuable services for non-profits.

While American soldiers were fighting Desert Storm in 1991, a bequest in the will of an Oklahoma City educator was made for local beautification. Sometimes donor desires help us grow in finding new ways of doing things, and Margaret Annis Boys taught us a lesson.

It was the first time the Community Foundation was charged with directing a fund that was established for a specific purpose, "the care and maintenance of public parks and medians in Oklahoma City, with emphasis on the planting and caring for flowers in said parks and medians and the mowing of said parks and medians."

Born on an Oklahoma farm, Margaret Annis Boys knew almost every flower that grows in this state. She retired from Buchanan Elementary School in 1972, after serving 42 years as a teacher and principal in the Oklahoma City School System. She never married, had many friends but no known heirs. When she died, her will bequeathed $1.2 million to be held in trust by the Oklahoma City Community Foundation.

The Margaret Annis Boys Trust came to the Community Foundation easily and unexpectedly, through the vision of Miss Boys and the advice of her estate planner. The challenge for the Community Foundation was to come up with a lasting way to carry out her wishes. A separate Advisory Committee chaired by a Trustee of the Community Foundation was established with a regular meeting schedule and grant request guidelines.

Most of the grant applicants to this fund have been voluntary neighborhood groups, many of which are not qualified as public charities by the Internal Revenue Service. While working with neighborhood associations has increased the time commitment from the Community Foundation staff, the value added by their volunteer efforts is

The W.E. & Margaret H. Davis Family

The concept for affiliated funds had been evolving since the early 1980's. Larger charitable funds and endowments needed to be treated differently. Donors wanted to maintain some interest and the management of large organizational endowments needed to be customized. The Community Foundation was now in a position to provide this service.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 accelerated the evolution of the Affiliated Fund. In the fall of that year, attorney Bill Cheek dropped into the Community Foundation's office at lunchtime one day to find out what could be done to help a client of his who was selling his business and wanted to set up a charitable foundation. The change in capital gains rate and personal income tax rate made contributions in 1986 much more advantageous than the following years. Before the end of 1986, Cheek had helped his clients, the William E. and Margaret Davis Family establish the first Affiliated Fund at the Community Foundation.

Following the Davis Family, the Omniplex moved its endowment funds to an Affiliated Fund at the Community Foundation in 1987. By combining this endowment with the existing Designated Fund, the new Omniplex Affiliated Fund was valued at more than $1.3 million.

Each Affiliated Fund was separately incorporated and was classified as a 509(a)(3) supporting organization of the Community Foundation. Each Board of Trustees has a majority appointed by the Community Foundation and the balance named by the donor family or organization. The Community Foundation provides all of the investment and administrative support for the fund, maintains all of the files and records, and complies with all of the requirements of the IRS. The Community Foundation provides the continuity which insures that the endowment is managed consistently and that the donors plained, "And the Fund is governed by a separate group of trustees. These trustees will be appointed by the Community Foundation and the Davis Ismile fointly."

intentions are carried out in the future.

Across the country, many private foundations were terminating and re-establishing themselves under the aegis of community Foundations, which are not subject to excise taxes, payout requirements, or restrictions on the types of investments that can be hled. Tax advatnages for donations to a community foundation are greater than those made to a private foundation. After 1994 these advantages will be even more important.

Nonprofit organizations which have moved endowments to Affiliated Funds now include Kirkpatrick Center, the Oklahoma Air Space Museum, Leadership Oklahoma City, the Oklahoma City Philharmonic, the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, the Deer Creek Community Enrichment Foundation, and the Oklahoma City Art Museum.

Family Affiliated Funds have become an excellent alternative to a private foundation for donors with unique assets to contribute which private foundation restrictions discourage. The Community Foundation administers the grant programs for these funds and works with the Distribution Committee of each fund to direct grants to areas of its specific interest.

Since its 1986 start, the eleven Affiliated Funds at the Community Foundation have become about 46 percent of the Community Foundation's permanent endowment. It was a good idea whose time has come.

The decade of the seventies saw Nixon's landslide reelection and resignation two years later; passage of the Equal Rights Amendment; withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam and celebration of the U.S. Bicentennial of Independence. Deregulation of trucking and airlines hurt the economy of Oklahoma. Pablo Picasso died and Louise Brown was born, the world's first test-tube baby. In Oklahoma City, the Biltmore Hotel was demolished and the General Motors Plant was dedicated.

Once the Oklahoma City Community Foundation was launched, it took another year or so for the new tax laws regarding public foundations to start materializing into contributions. While the law does not permit a donor to retain an absolute "legal" power to determine the beneficiaries of his contribution, he can designate, or state a preference, on how he wants the funds used. This preference becomes a guide for the Community Foundation's staff and Board of Trustees.

To become knowledgeable contributors to the Community Foundation, donors needed to add a few new terms to their charitable vocabularies. A "Designated Fund" is the total of all contributions designated by donors to benefit a specific charity. One of the first designated funds established at the Oklahoma City Community Foundation was for the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center, established with a $25,000 contribution from Jaspar Ackerman, a rancher and businessman from Colorado. By making this contribution, Ackerman established a name fund for himself. A "Name Fund" is established when a donor's contributions to the Community Foundation reach $5,000. Earnings from designated funds are distributed to non-profit agencies annually, along with names of donors who have contributed to that fund.

Other designated funds followed The National Cowboy Hall of Fame in 1971: Allied Arts; Lyric Theatre; Oklahoma City Beautiful; Oklahoma Zoological Society; Oklahoma Christian College; Oklahoma City University; Pathways Child Development Center; Mercy Health Center; Salvation Army; Sunbeam Home; World Neighbors; YMCA and YWCA.

By the end of the seventies, there were well over 100 designated funds at the Community Foundation. More than 1,000 individuals, families, organizations, agencies, and businesses had made contributions. The concept of endowment had taken hold.

In 1978, the price of oil hit $40 a barrel. By 1979, it was still going strong with no end in sight, and in Oklahoma City it didn't seem like a time to think about tomorrow. But thinking about tomorrow is what an endowment fund is all about.

Those associated with the Oklahoma City Community Foundation were thinking about how to celebrate its first decade. An offer was made by an anonymous donor to match any funds generated by non-profit agencies for their designated funds at the Community Foundation. This offer benefitted 61 funds, which raised a total of $739,494 that was matched by the anonymous donor.

The anonymous donor was, of course, John Kirkpatrick. In the fall of 1992, he decided to issue another challenge. Of the 74 non-profits that were eligible, 65 participated and raised a total of $341,380 that was matched. In 1993, another Kirkpatrick Challenge spurred 112 non-profits to raise $665,412. In 1994, another Challenge started.

Each time there has been a challenge, non-profits have made efforts they might not otherwise have made and new donors have materialized. The opportunity to double one's money is, simply, an offer that is unique and hard to refuse. As a matter of fact, the Kirkpatrick Challenges are unheard of in the world of community foundations except in Oklahoma City.

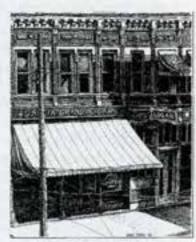

John Kirkpatrick once said, "If you don't work to do something with what you earned, there isn't much point in working for it." He also said, "Money takes a lot of watching." The essential dominance with which he guided the Oklahoma City Community Foundation in its earlier years has yielded to the organization's own momentum. But occasionally we must ask, where would we be without him?

1979-80 Annual Report

Oklahoma City Community Foundation Annual Report

John E. Kirkpatrick welcomes FCA director, Chuck Bowman to Designated Fund lunch.

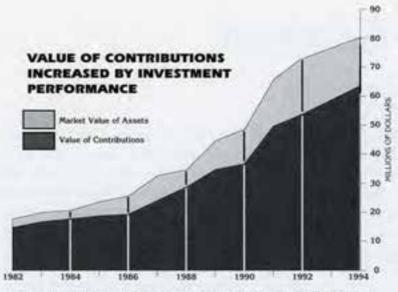

Anne Morgan congratulates Eleanor Maurer for 25 years of service.

The twenty-fifth year of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation began with four new Trustees, a challenge for Designated Funds from John and Eleanor Kirkpatrick, and a renewed commitment to help the community meet its changing needs.

Trustees Anne Hodges Morgan, Jeanette Gamba, Raymond Hefner, and William Johnstone helped the Community Foundation fill out its full complement of twelve trustees for the first time. At the end of the year, James R. Tolbert and Ray T. Anthony completed nine years of service and retired. After three years of service as president, George Records passed the leadership of the Community Foundation to J. Edward Barth. More than thirty current and past Trustees gathered for an annual dinner in June demonstrating a commitment to the Community Foundation from an extraordinary group of community leaders.

For Designated Funds, it was a year almost too busy to celebrate. John and Eleanor Kirkpatrick offered challenges to 121 Designated Funds with offers to match contributions to the funds up to a certain goal for each fund. The challenge was enthusiastically undertaken and more than $700,000 was raised during the seven-week effort. The generous offer from the Kirkpatricks is unique in American philanthropy and has given the concept of endowment development broad-based community support.

The total permanent fund contributions to the Oklahoma City Community Foundation through June 30, 1994 were SG2 million. The market value of the assets was SS1 million demonstrating on increasing value provided by investment performance.

For the first time in several years, distributions to Designated Funds were handed out at a community luncheon held at Civic Center Hall of Mirrors. Two hundred fifty non-profit representatives, Trustees, past Trustees, and friends of the Community Foundation gathered to affirm the broad base of participation and support which has been developed at the Community Foundation since 1969.

The only person continuously associated with the Community Foundation since its start as staff, Trustee, or officer is Eleanor J. Maurer. Mrs. Maurer's twenty-five years of service as Treasurer were honored at the Designated Fund luncheon.

Grants and distributions of earnings exceeded $3 million for the fiscal year. The Grants Review Committee began assessing community needs in order to develop areas of focus for the Fund for Oklahoma City. The first area chosen was opportunities for children and youth during the non-school hours. A significant commitment of time and resources was made to this area. Other focus areas are expected to emerge from the ongoing review.

Serving the charitable needs of the Oklahoma City area requires that the Oklahoma City Community Foundation provide both efficient administration of charitable funds and effective methods of investment which maximize the resources available to support the needs of the community. By keeping the cost of administration low, the Community Foundation provides a valuable service for both donors and agencies which encourages increased contributions and the growth of permanent funds.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1994, the total cost of operation was .69 percent of market value, well below the national average for community foundations of 1.50 percent.

Investment performance is viewed in the long-term by the Investment Committee. Equity investment for all types of endowments suffered from a down-market during the first six-months of 1994. The Community Foundations total return on all funds for the fiscal year was -0.2 percent. However Designated Fund organizations received a 5.0 percent cash distribution and an additional 1.5 percent in realized capital gains was added to the funds. Investment performance is monitored carefully by the Investment Committee with the goals of achieving the best total return and safeguarding the endowments assets.

As twenty-five years of service is marked, the Community Foundation fondly remembers the donors and organizations which have come together to create the basis for the Community Foundation's role and opportunity for service. Even before the twenty-fifth anniversary year concluded, opportunities for the future are clearly before us.

Donor Advised Fund Grants

During the Fiscal Year ending June 30, 1994, the Oklahoma City Community Foundation distributed more than $94,000 in earnings from Donor Advised Funds to local non-profit organizations. Donor-Advised Funds are permanent endowment funds which generate earnings each year. At the end of the fiscal year, the Trustees of the Community Foundation send information about community needs to these donors and ask their advise concerning the distribution of earnings from the funds back to the community. Donors are able to suggest specific grants to the Trustees which review the requests and information from the organizations. The following are those grants which were approved by the Trustees from Donor Advised Funds. Included in the total are grants made to the Designated Funds of the organizations as part of the 1993 Kirkpatrick Designated Fund Challenge.

As the world watched the Berlin Wall come down in 1989, Oklahoma City watched the Olympic Sports Festival and celebrated the Centennial of the Land Run of 1889. For many years, the Fund for Oklahoma City, unrestricted endowment funds at the Community Foundation, had been used for grants chosen by the Trustees. In anticipation of these special events of 1989, the Community Foundation began to focus the grants on "new initiatives", activities that would help the community develop new programs and services. These grants also encouraged projects which involved cooperation among different groups to meet community-wide needs.

The Fund for Oklahoma City provided more than $175,000 to support seven major projects for the Centennial. While all of the projects received additional support from other sources, the Centennial Grants from the Community Foundation were instrumental in getting the projects underway. Centennial projects included a city-wide cleanup campaign, the production of a historical map with the history of the Land Run, and support for a traveling troop of artists performing entertaining stories from the Land Run era.

After the Centennial, the focus on developing new programs and helping the community meet emerging needs continued. Projects have included establishing recycling centers, helping support a community tree bank, furnishing a tissue transplant retrieval lab, producing an operatic version of Snow White for children in Oklahoma schools, seminars for high school guidance counselors and nurses who work with the elderly, and a transitional school for homeless children.

Through the Fund for Oklahoma City and other field of interest funds, the Community Foundation can also serve as a catalyst—to stimulate thinking in new directions, to recognize new needs and help find ways to fill them. Sometimes a need can not be foreseen. The Community Foundation is in a unique position to recognize these emerging needs and join with other groups to come up with solutions. The Fund for Oklahoma City is now $6 million strong, thanks to the vision of donors who were willing to provide for needs they knew they could not foresee.

Trustees, Officers, and Staff

The Board of Trustees and staff of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation administer endowment funds that have supported charitable causes in central Oklahoma since 1969. An endowment fund provides annual income through investment earnings. The Community Foundation owes its beginning to founder John E. Kirkpatrick and other Oklahoma City citizens who recognized the need for a steady and permanent source of income for non-profit agencies. To realize this goal, they created an entity patterned after the most successful community foundations in the nation. In the words of its first annual report, the Oklahoma City Community Foundation was "designed to meet the test of time."

A twelve-member Board of Trustees representing a broad range of groups in the community are responsible for the development of assets, the administration of the endowment funds consistent with the wishes of donors, and the distribution of earnings. They are assisted by three non-trustee officers and by a seven-member staff who provide professional service to both donors and non-profit organizations in the development and administration of permanent endowments for the community.

The Oklahoma City Community Foundation is an important community resource with assets of $81 million and annual distributions of more than $3 million to over 200 non-profit organizations.

"...give a lasting gift to your community."

The Oklahoma City Community Foundation would not exist without donors. Assets, once contributed, must become a permanent part of its endowment. However, the Community Foundation is firmly committed to recognizing and preserving the original charitable intentions of all donors.

At the Oklahoma City Community Foundation, small donor contributions receive the same investment return, for the same minimal administrative cost, as large donor contributions. While donations of all sizes are welcome, a Donor Fund is established when total contributions reach $1,000. A Name Fund is created when total contributions reach $5,000. Donations can be made by an individual or group. They may be made in many forms cash, marketable securities, life insurance, oil and gas royalties, real estate and bequests through wills and trusts.

Donors may choose to advise the Community Foundation on how they wish the earnings from their donations to be distributed or they may wish to contribute to the Fund for Oklahoma City, a fund that enables the Trustees to respond to changing needs in the community.

Whatever the choice, by contributing to the Oklahoma City Community Foundation, you give a lasting gift to your community. We welcome the opportunity to visit with you. he fiscal year ending June 30, 1994 represented the 25th year of service of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation. The cover illustration shows the growth in the permanent assets from $45,000 at the end of its first year to more than $80 million today. The Community Foundation has served a wide range of donors and charitable purposes since 1969. The milestones on the timeline mark not only significant events in the growth of assets, but also the range of services the Community Foundation has provided to donors and non-profit organizations in Oklahoma City.

The success of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation is a tribute to the individuals and organizations who have come together to build this community and have also provided for its future support through permanent endowment. Inside the annual report are the stories of the individuals whose contributions to the Community Foundation will continue to enrich the community for many years to come. The twenty-five-year story of the Oklahoma City Community Foundation is really the stories of hundreds of donors who have contributed to its growth and share in its benefits to Oklahoma City, both now and into the future.
